POLITICAL POINTS.

Nineteen daily newspapers that supported Garfield, and whose aggregate circulation is nearly a million copies daily, are out-spoken in their opposition to Blaine. There never was such a revolt in the history of politics in this country.—Evansville Courier.

The Louisville Times gives notice that should Ben Butler secure the democratic nomination for the presidency it will take to the woods. It would find lots of good company under "the greenwood tree." We expect to gather walnuts about that time ourselves.—Breckinridge News.

Ex-Senator McDonald has left Washington for his home. Prominent Indiana and New York Congressmen have been consulting with him during his visit, and it is reported the result of the conference is an agreement to push "McDonald and Sloan" for the Democratic Convention, in the event of Tilden's declination. Voorhees and others believe Tilden will decline sure, and think McDonald and Sloan will surely carry New York and Indiana, two doubtful essential States.

Perhaps no man outside of the busy scenes of political life keeps closer watch upon the current events of the day than Gen. Green Clay Smith, of this city. Certainly few if any men so young as he have a career more full of stirring events. Educated as a lawyer, he early entered the army and did splendid service, reaching the rank of Brigadier General of Volunteers. He served two terms in Congress, and by appointment from President Lincoln, one term as Governor of Montana. He lacked but one vote of being nominated for Vice President with Mr. Lincoln in 1864, and if that vote had been cast for him instead of for Andrew Johnson, he would have succeeded Mr. Lincoln, and would to-day be an ex-President of the United States. In 1872 he was the nominee of the Prohibition party for President on a ticket with James Black, of Pennsylvania. For a number of years since the war Gen. Smith has been a devoted minister of the Gospel, and is now the faithful pastor of a Baptist church at Twenty-second and Walnut, in this city. He has been all the time a consistent Republican.

Yesterday, when met by a Times representative and spoken to in regard to the Chicago nominations, he said in the frankest manner:

"I can not support Mr. Blaine, and the party which nominates such a candidate deserves to be defeated. I know Mr. Blaine," said Gen. Smith, "and neither his manners nor his methods commend him to the honest, patriotic citizen of the republic. He carried into Congress the manners acquired upon the political hustings, and attempted to control that body as he would a cross roads constituency. I said before the meeting of the Chicago Convention that if he were nominated it would cause me to support any respectable ticket the Democrats might nominate, and I intend to do so."—Louisville Times.

It has been generally understood that Harper's Weekly would decline to support Mr. Blaine. From its leading editorial this week the following is taken as exemplifying its line of action and its opinion of the Republican ticket:

"The nomination of Mr. Blaine, although it is doubtless agreeable to the majority of the party, as shown at Chicago, because a large part of the apparent opposition, as in the Indiana and Illinois, and even in the Ohio delegation, was friendly to his nomination, ought to reach Republican as showing how dangerously far the Republican standard has fallen. The nomination at Chicago, made against the most friendly Republican remonstrance, have forced upon Republicans the conviction that the great objects of the Republican party, honest and economical administration, peaceful and honorable foreign relations, the progressive purification of the public service at home, a wise reduction of the revenue and that sense of general security which springs from the moral elevation of the Administration, are not to be expected from Republican success. Those who have aroused deep and general protest of the Republican conscience must bear the responsibility of the result. Fidelity to Republican principle requires indifference to present Republican success, and Harper's Weekly, which more than once has not hesitated in the interest of public morality and of party purification to oppose other Republican nominations, can not sustain the significant one against which it has so earnestly protested, and which is a practical abdication of Republican character

ANNOUNCEMENTS

We are authorized to announce JOHN BOYD as a Republican candidate for Sheriff of Christian county. Election August 1884.

We are authorized to announce R. H. MARKHAM as a candidate for Constable in the Hopkinsville District. Election August, 1884.

We are authorized to announce ED. W. GLASS as a candidate for Constable in the Hopkinsville District. Election August, 1884.

Ben Butler's letter accepting the Greenback nomination for President is as long as the moral law.

Capt. Silas F. Miller, of Louisville, will not support Blaine and gives it as his candid opinion that the Tattooed man cannot be elected. Cap'n, you are right.

Gen. B. H. Bristow says that he feels it to be his duty as a Republican not to vote for Blaine. He is the man who unearthed the infamous whisky ring frauds during Grant's administration.

Hon. Jas. F. Clay has made some recent notoriety by attempting to introduce a bill to repeal the civil service act. The bill was unceremoniously sat upon in the committee room.

We acknowledge the receipt of a complimentary ticket to the Adair county Agricultural Association, to be held at Columbia, Ky., Aug. 19-22. Hon H. C. Baker is President and Dr. B. T. Wood, Secretary.

It is claimed that Blaine was a friend of Garfield and yet when Garfield was shot down at his side, Blaine ignominiously ran and left him prostrate upon the depot platform. This is a matter of history and cannot be denied.

Sargent, Minister to Germany, was removed and Herr Von Eschendorfer, Germany's United States Minister, is dead and neither government is in a hurry to fill its vacancy in the Diplomatic service. It is a mutual case of snubbing.

The Democrats of Maine held their convention Tuesday and endorsed Cleveland for President and nominated Jno. B. Redman for Governor. The platform endorsed the national platform of 1880 and declared opposition to war taxes and in favor of the retention of the present duties on whisky.

It is stated upon the authority of one of his intimate friends that Roscoe Conkling has left the Republican party and has joined the Democratic party by uniting with the Manhattan club which no Republican can join. The nomination of Blaine did the work. The Democratic party will welcome him with open arms. Conkling's brother-in-law, Horatio Seymour, was the Democratic candidate for President in 1868.

Blaine's name is composed of six letters. He was nominated on Friday (six letters), the sixth day of the week, the sixth day of that month which is the sixth month of the year, and he will be the sixth President whose name commences with James, if elected.—Clinton Times.

This is rather a curious coincidence it is true, but you know there is an old adage that there is luck in odd numbers.

The Calhoun Courier is about the strongest Clay paper in this district. It is using its little tommyhawk with a vengeance, if not with much effect, upon McKenize and the South Kentuckian. It is of the opinion that Clay will have a walk-over, but others in the district equally as well posted, think he will be fortunate if he can crawl under.—Madisonville Times.

The boys are expecting to have a horse race here next Saturday, and there is talk of trying to get Logan to come down and ride one of the "critters." It is reported that he used to be an excellent jockey. We suggest green for his colors.—Metropolis Democrat.

How did you find out anything about Logan's jockeyism? Has any body been telling you that he used to ride races for the Alonzo Pennington party in Christian county, Ky., about the year 1843-4, or thereabouts?—Paducah News.

The Democratic Convention in New York, Wednesday, was entirely harmonious. Tammany Hall, Irving Hall and the county Democracy, all agreed upon a compromise list of delegates and the party will be united in the coming campaign. Gov. Cleveland will have about three-fourths of the delegates to Chicago in his favor, and Flower the remainder, and it is believed that all will unite on Cleveland when they get to Chicago and Flower's friends see that their man stands no chance.

This has been a week of conventions. The Democrats have held conventions in New York, Michigan, Maine, Delaware, Colorado, Louisiana, and Tennessee. The Republicans in Indiana and Vermont. The anti-Blaine Republicans held a meeting in New York City. The prohibitionists of Illinois and Pennsylvania met and numerous Congressional conventions were held all over the country and others are still meeting every day.

THE CONGRESSIONAL CONVENTION.

Called at Seebree Sept. 11th.

At a meeting of the 2nd Congressional District Committee, held at Owensboro, Ky., Friday June 13th, 1884—present Judge J. T. Scott, member from Hopkins county, who also presented the proxy of G. A. Champlin, member from Christian; F. M. Baker presented the proxy of Dr. E. A. Price, member from Webster; E. P. Millett, member from Davies who also presented the proxy of Judge John S. Geiger, member from Union.

On motion of Judge Scott, Seebree City was selected as a suitable place and Thursday Sept. 11th, 1884 at 1 P. M., as the time for holding a Democratic convention to nominate a candidate to represent the 2nd District of Kentucky in the 49th Congress of the U. S.

The basis of representation was fixed at 1 delegate for every 200 votes and fractions over 100 cast for Knott.

It is left discretionary with counties to hold county conventions or primaries, at such time as county committees may elect.

On motion adjourned.

E. P. MILLETT, Chairman.

Logan is a renegade Democrat. In 1853 he originated the Black Laws, of Illinois, that prohibited the immigration of free negroes to the State. In 1860 he was in Congress, as a Democrat, denouncing the abolitionists as seeking to "destroy property." He was called "dirty work" Logan by the Republicans because he assisted in arresting fugitive slaves, and the following is an extract from one of his speeches:

"You call it the dirty work of the Democratic party to catch fugitive slaves for the Southern people. We are willing to perform that dirty work. I do not consider it disgraceful to perform any work, dirty or not dirty, which is in accordance with the laws of the land and the constitution of the country, and calculated to assist men in recovering that which is their rights, guaranteed to them under the Constitution and laws of the land."

Soon after this Logan changed his politics, became an officer in the Federal army, and since the war has been a bloody-shirt Republican. This is the man the colored voters are expected to vote for. Will they lick the hand that smote them when they needed friends to champion their cause? We shall see.

Who is Slocum?—Cadiz Out Guard. He is an able, cultured gentleman, was a gallant General in the Union army, has always been a staunch, consistent Democrat, and is at present a Congressman from New York. If he should be placed on the Democratic ticket, New York would be certain to go Democratic and Logan's war record would be overshadowed to such an extent that the bloody-shirt would have to be furled and laid away as useless in the coming campaign. If bitter animosities are engendered between the followers of Cleveland and Flower, it is not improbable that Gen. Slocum will be the eastern man on the ticket and he would strengthen and adorn either end of it. Is your question answered?

Bordeaux, June 16—At a balloon ascension at Place Quincenne yesterday, George W. Roosevelt, United States Consul, and wife were present. A French soldier fired a pistol at the Americans. A bullet passed through Roosevelt's hat, contused his head and knocked him over. The wounded man pointed out the soldier, but the latter, with two companions escaped. It is supposed the soldier mistook the Consul for an officer in civilian's dress against whom he had a grudge. The commander at Bordeaux has ordered an inquiry.

The Courier-Journal in its enthusiasm for McDonald is endeavoring to mislead the public. The statement that the Kentucky delegation in Congress is a unit for McDonald is flatly contradicted by the facts, though it is doubtless true that a majority of them favor the Indiana statesman. The fame of "O. O. S." does not rest upon his reliability as a correspondent, as the readers of the Courier-Journal have reason to know.

At Greensburg, Ky., last Sunday, Ed Larrimore and his nephew got into a fight. They agreed to lay down all weapons and fight "fist and skull," but as soon as Ed was disarmed his nephew grabbed up a hatchet and struck the old man two fatal blows on the head. When the young man is brought to trial let him emulate the example of George Washington and turn his fearful eyes upon the jury and say, "Gentlemen, I cannot tell a lie; I did it with my little hatchet."

The father of his country got off without punishment and maybe the scheme might work in this instance.

The ticket of Cleveland and Niblack has been suggested. The latter is one of Indiana's ablest jurists and statesmen, and it is said would be a stronger man than McDonald for the second place.

The Palladium solicits subscribers upon the ground that it is the only paper in New Haven, (Conn.), that is supporting Blaine and Logan.

The Greenbackers of this, the Second District have nominated C. M. Preston, of Union county, for Congress.

Logan's Grammar.

Amid the wreck of matter and the bolting of organs the Republican candidates are consoled by the thought that the New York Tribune stands up to the rack, fodder or no fodder. It is really cruel that the following tribute to the tail of the ticket, which appeared in the Tribune Jan. 15, 1875, should have been resuscitated for campaign literature: "Pranced there in upon the arena or the great debate, like a trick mule in a circus, or a spavined nightmare upon the track of a beautiful dream—Logan, of Illinois. There was a vision of mustaches, eyebrows and hair piled on each other in arches; a large brandishing of arms, a pose and strident war-whoop; and much as though a picture of the Deerfield massacre had stepped out from the pages of our early history, Logan took the American Senate by its large, capacious ear. And then he went for his mother tongue. He smote it right and left, hip and thigh, and showed no mercy. Swinging the great broad-axe of his logic high in air, he turned it ere it fell, and with the hammer side struck the language of sixty millions of people fairly in the face and mashed it beyond recognition. Under his stroke the floor of the American Senate was spattered with the remnants of a once proud vocabulary, and messengers, door-keepers and pages were covered from head to foot with the spray. In the fearful two hours which followed the first roar of his oration all the parts of speech were routed and put to flight. There were orphaned adjectives and widowed nouns; bachelor verbs driven to polygamy and polygamous verbs left lonely; conjunctions dismembered, prepositions scattered, adverbs disheveled and distorted, and syntax flung into wild disorder. It was a great day for Logan.

He set his teeth into the language as the untamed tiger of the jungles takes between his mouth and paws the wearing apparel of the wayfarer and the ripping of it was heard through all the forest depths. It reverberated to the other end of the capitol and sluggish Representatives lifted up their eyes and listened to the roar with terrified awe. Some started for the scene, but upon being told the cause of the disturbance in the brief communication, Logan's upturned back with full assurance that they could hear from that end of the capitol all that was worth hearing. So through two hours Logan swung his beautiful arms over the heads of Senate like the beams of a government derrick, while his chin churned the language like a pole driver in a heavy sea and the baffled reporters made wild plunges with their pencils to gather up his regurgitations for the printer.

Ah! Logan is a great man—a statesman. When he throws his intellect into a question, whether it is of finance or self-government, or of sticking to the ship, something has got to come. And you may always know where to find him—to wit, where he has always been, drawing pay from the government in some capacity. He likes only fifteen or twenty things of being an orator. He has lungs."

The law reducing the rate of postage on newspapers from 2 cents to 1 cent on every four ounces is now in force.

Senators Ingalls, of Kansas, and Brown, of Georgia, had a little round of personalities in the Senate this week.

Delaware Democrats held their convention Tuesday and formally presented Bayard to the country as a candidate for the Presidency.

A Woman's Heart.

Some one writes in sneering way, How it is but idle play, To read a woman's heart! Such a soft and silly thing, Never feels the slightest sting, From Love's cruel dart.

I have found the wisest secret, Never made it out quite clear, (Tho' it must have vexed!) Why she possesses so strange a book, Whence no one may ever look, And understand the text.

Perhaps you read a page or two, That let Greek or Latin Hebrew, And told of Love's own way; But soon it leads to baffling things, Then subtle problems closely flings, And none the rules obey.

Who shall analyze it well, Who of daring wonders tell, And make it plain as day? Why woman loves, and then she don't, Why says "I will," and then "I won't," And goes when you bid her stay!

MEN'S BARGAINS.

Good honest suits for $5, $6 and $7. Elegant suits at $10, $12 and $15, and as fine as anybody wants at $18, $20, $22 and $25.

BECAUSE WE ARE DOING

A tremendous business in our honest and liberal way, and some would-be competitors, are setting on their branches, waiting Milwaukee-like, for something to turn up; the growl and denounce our generous energy, and blame us for their lack of enterprise and likewise lack of trade. We are up and doing! Working for our fellowmen and working for ourselves. We don't want the earth, but do want all the customers we can get by honest enterprise and honorable treatment. When we say that we name lower prices than any house in the Southwest, we mean it, and with these low prices we give with every cash sale of Men's Clothing to the amount of $12 or over, with every cash sale of Boys' Clothing to the amount of $12 or over, and with every cash sale of Men's Furnishing Goods to the amount of $12 or over the choice of a Genuine Waterbury Watch, a Peep O' Day Clock or a Load of Best Lump Coal, delivered to any part of Louisville, New Albany or Jeffersonville. It will pay you to trade with us.

KILT SUITS

From Imported Cloths at $3, $5, $10, $15, $20 and $25. In Boys' Suits our prices are so low that people have hesitated to buy, fearing goods were not all right because we asked so little money for them.

SOCIALITIES

Father time is the correct standard for this latitude at M. D. Kelly's.

Miss Lou Redd is visiting relatives in Cadiz.

Prof. C. H. Dietrich left yesterday to attend the National Teachers' Association, at Madison, Wis.

Miss Maggie Walker, of Louisville, returned home yesterday after a visit to her sister, Mrs. E. W. Bottomly.

Messrs. Thos. W. Long and Clifton Crabb and Mrs. Dr. Young left for Dawson, Wednesday, to spend several days.

Prof. James E. Scobey and family have arrived. The college will be ready for their occupancy in a day or two.

The Misses Alexander, of Harrodsburg, who have been visiting their aunt, Mrs. Clarence Anderson, will return home to-day.

Mrs. C. H. Dietrich and her sister, Miss Marion Lander, left yesterday to pay a visit to Prof. Dietrich's sister, at Duncan, Pa.

Mrs. John Pyle, of the Sinking Fork neighborhood, returned home yesterday after spending a week with her son, Mr. A. W. Pyle.

Miss Nellie Hale, who has been boarding at Rev. J. T. Barrow's and attending school, has returned to her home, near Kirkmansville, to spend the vacation.

Mr. Thos. H. Wade, a steady and industrious young man, of Fairview, has gone to Huntsville, Ala., to accept a position in the furniture house of E. B. Carter & Co.

Mr. R. G. Pryor, formerly with Ross, Robbins & Co., but now with Louis Sailer's Sons, the largest paper house in Cincinnati, was in the city yesterday. He has many friends here who will congratulate him upon his promotion and wish him much success.

Mr. Chas. H. Anderson, eldest son of Mr. Clarence Anderson, the photographer, and a young man of many estimable and genial traits, will leave to-day for Harrodsburg, to take charge of the photographic gallery of his uncle, Mr. Spillman, who is forced to quit the business on account of failing health. He is a very popular young man and will be sadly missed by his many friends here. We wish him much success in his new home.

Candler's Stock Sale.

DIED.

WOOD—At his residence on the Princeton road, in the suburbs of this city, Tuesday June 17, 1884, James Wood, son of Geo. W. Wood. Interred at the city cemetery Wednesday morning.

The music classes of Mrs. V. W. Crabb and Miss Jennie Monks, gave an entertaining concert at the Opera House last Friday night which was well attended, and highly enjoyed by those who were present.

Mrs. Roth was burned to death at Erie, Pa., Tuesday.

HERE AND THERE.

Ben Thompson, Life Insurance.

Howe's time is the city standard.

Campbell and Rodgers, Ins. Agts.

The telephone posts are being taken up and replaced by larger and higher ones.

Seeman gave two more of his sleight-of-hand performances on Tuesday and Wednesday nights.

There is a great deal of building going on in the city. Cottages are springing up as if by magic on almost every street.

The first peaches of the season made their appearance in the market this week. They were imported and sold at fancy prices.

Notice the advertisement of the Commercial College, of Lexington, Kentucky, in this issue. It is one of the best schools to be found anywhere for young men desiring a practical business education.

We were given a taste of sure enough weather this week, and the hot summer jokes which have been packed away on ice for twelve months, will soon begin to make their regular annual appearance.

Now that hot weather is coming on, the health officer should give his attention to localities in the city, where filth is allowed to accumulate. There are many places in the city that do not smell as sweet as a rosebud with the dew on it.

Cerulean Springs, that delightful summer resort, is now ready for the reception of guests. There will be a grand barbecue there July 4th, followed by the opening ball at night. Everybody is invited to attend both. The water is in good condition and everything is in order to receive guests.

In a conspicuous position in this paper will be found the large and attractive advertisement of Hopkinsville's leading jeweler, Mr. James M. Howe. It is one of the most complete establishments of the kind in Southern Kentucky, and we take pleasure in commending Mr. Howe to our patrons as in every way worthy of their confidence and patronage.

"A young widow" advertises in a Louisville paper that she would like to correspond with a gentleman 45 or 50 years old, with matrimonial intention, who can furnish her with a good home. For the benefit of some old stage in this county who ought to marry we give her address, viz: Mrs. Forebaca Josephia, Louisville, Ky.

The Public School Library will be open every Saturday morning between the hours of 9 and 12 o'clock for the benefit of those entitled to draw books from the same. All children who were pupils at the close of school and expect to return as such for the coming year are invited to draw books provided they have advanced beyond the fourth grade.

Teachers for the Public Schools for the session beginning this fall were elected last Monday. All of the teachers of the last session were re-elected and there will be no change. This is as it should be for the Schools were never in better condition and the teachers who have raised it to its present high standard deserve to be retained. It is whispered, however, that two or three of the young ladies may have to resign on account of other engagements "before the leaves begin to fall."

The L. & N. Railroad, through the General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Mr. C. P. Atmore, has engaged the services of Rev. F. L. Braun, of the Lutheran Mission here, on and after July 1, for the benefit of all Germans that will settle on the line of that road. He has to look after the temporal and spiritual welfare of the immigrants, has to preach to them, advise and assist them in the choice and purchase of land, lest they might fall in the hands of land sharks and become victims of unscrupulous men. The position of Rev. Mr. Braun will be responsible, but also very beneficial to the development of the country. The railroad did a very wise step to provide for the immigrants, for the better the immigrants are protected against swindle, the larger the influx of immigrants will become, and the more the tide of immigration will turn to this country, and aid to develop its great natural resources.

The Russellville Herald-Enterprise pays this high compliment to one of our brightest young men, who delivered the Alumni address at the Bethel College commencement exercises:

Wednesday evening Prof. John O. Rust, of Hopkinsville, graduate of the class of 1881, delivered an address before the College Alumni. His subject was the great saying of Gallileo: "The World Moves." His address was a thoughtful production and was delivered in a masterly style. It showed considerable research among the books and yet it could not be called booky; for the speaker dealt with some of the most practical subjects of current thought. His graphic description of the civilization of the ancients was fine; his summary of our own civilization was equally as good. His reference to such live topics as the "New South," Federal aid to Education and the present status of the thinking world towards religion engaged the thoughtful attention of many and showed that the speaker was fully up with the issues of the day. A young man who can grasp difficult subjects as these and can make as fine a presentation of them as Prof. Rust did, has a future before him to which his friends may justly look forward with eager anticipations.

A Countryman Abroad.

ED. SOUTH KENTUCKIAN:

A very large number of my especial friends, and some persons who are not so very friendly with me, have asked me to write up for your paper some of the scenes and incidents of my trip to and week's stay in the queen city of the West—Chicago.

I thought I would not do so, but the pressure is so great I can not resist. Old men have asked me, bright blue eyes have looked into mine and rosy lips have murmured, "Please do!" Oh! that I could write as in the days of long ago—Oh! for the inspiration that the hills of my own native county used to bring me. But, the dear people are clamorous to know something about Chicago, and I must keep close to them. Full well do I remember how I asked them four years ago to place in my hands one of the most responsible trusts they had to give, and then, two years later how I asked them to say by their ballots, "Well done good and faithful servant," and how they responded in a matter of history. And then later still, when a great storm cloud gathered over my head in the social world and the lurid glare of its forked lightnings lit up the frowning of my enemies, and the deep toned rumblings of its muttered and sullen thunders threatened to destroy me, it was the people, the brown skinned, sunburned yeomanry of the county that whispered to me that the storm would be over, that there would come a rift in the clouds, that the sunshine would again come laughing and dancing back to me and to my life. I can not go back on the people. Perish the thought—perish forever be this tongue and withered forever this arm, if the first should ever utter a syllable, or the latter ever be raised against the people who never refused me anything I have ever asked at their hands. If it were left to me I would not write an account of this trip, in fact I feel to-night like exclaiming as the Savior did in the garden of Gethsemane: "Would to God this cup might pass."

It is the inspiration of a life time to see Chicago. Poor as I am to-night, knowing full well as I do that in six short months I go from here with the cream of my life behind me, the open jaws of a selfish world before me, without a dollar in my pocket or a spot I can call my home, with a great debt hanging like a mill-stone around my neck—so great in its proportions that only a general bankrupt law will erase it, notwithstanding all this I would not banish from my memory Chicago with its wild turbulent scenes for all the diadems that ever sparkled in the crowns of Europe's kings and queens, living or dead. In fact I could not banish from my memory broad prairies, green as the bay tree and fertile as the valley of the famed Nile—elegant cities, rising up before me all over the State of Illinois—grand churches rearing their tall spires until they are almost lost amid the stars—beautiful steamers walking the lake like things of life—gifted and impassioned orators telling to surging thousands of the heroic deeds of our civil and military heroes—the wild cloud splitting huzza from the excited multitude at the mention of the name of the sainted martyr who stepped from the top round of fame's ladder into heaven with the broken shackles of four million slaves in his hand. The eternal racket of a thousand newsboys, the endless jingle of a hundred street-car bells, the stealthy tramp of as many policemen, the surging, roaring sea of people that rushed hither and thither and everywhere—some with a fixed purpose, others like myself, just moving around aimlessly and objectlessly, as an atom floating through space. Forget all this! I would as soon attempt to forget the pale, sweet face all wrinkled and battle stained by more than three score years and ten, of her who first taught me to whisper her own hallowed name, and later still, of that "bright forever" beyond the shading and the shining of which the good people sing, and into which we all hope to glide when the sickening scenes of this weary world are over. There was only one thing that shadowed my trip. I am as superstitious as a negro. I won't ride with a dog-wood switch, kill cats, stir soap with any sort of a stick except sassafras, or split stove wood on Sunday. In fact I am so superstitious that I do not like to split stove wood even on Monday. This is so strong in my make up that it amounts almost to intuition. I felt all the time I was gone that some great impending calamity was hanging over me. (I believe as firmly in fate, in destiny, as Napoleon the first did; and when I left here I felt I should return no more, and as the train sped on and I rode through my dear old home just south of Crofton—notwithstanding I knew it was gone from me forever—that the loved ones were scattered all over the length and breadth of this broad country—that a stranger's hand would pull the old, old latch-string—that only strangers crossed the sacred precincts of the dear old house, my heart, if I have any, arose up into my throat and these eyes all unused as they are to the melting mood, were filled with tears.

But for once I was wrong in my superstitions. Nothing marred the happiness of me or my friends, and now that the sober second thought has come and the frolic is over, and the stern realities of this workaday world have come back to us, the whole week's wild work and confusion seems more like a splendid dream than a living reality. I never saw so much before, and live as I may—until time has whitened these locks and bent this form—but I never expect to see so much again. Were the curtain to fall and the drama to end this night; were these the last words and then this hand were to lie crumpled in the grave, I should certainly say all the world (except one little blue-eyed darling) was in Chicago. More when the mood moves.

HIRAM.

PUEBLO, COLO.

June 12, 1884.

EDITOR SOUTH KENTUCKIAN:
I hope you will not be disagreeably surprised to find that I have complied with your request to write you something of this city. The Pueblos (numbering about 25,000 inhabitants) though built as one city, have two charters, two Post Offices and in fact a separate form of government in every way; the city, however, is far from fulfilling the saying that "a house divided against itself, etc.," for I know of no place in the State with a more hopeful future. The Bessemer Steel Works that have recently created such a sensation in the East are located here. I have been over them several times and seen the whole process of converting the iron ore into iron and the making of nails and steel rails. I wish I could give you some conception of how beautiful this process is, witnessed at night when the building is lighted with electricity. Perhaps those of you who have seen but little of the refining of gold and silver can sympathize with me in my fascination for the smelters. There are two here already and a third is being erected. I spend quite a liberal portion of my time in going over them and enjoy it, although there is very little about it I thoroughly understand. You doubtless know there are some things in the process that are a jealously guarded secret by the metallurgists. I hope you will not be malicious enough to think that my womanish curiosity is getting the upper hand of me on this subject; it is really a deeper interest that deserves a better name. I have visited the State Lunatic Asylum here and find it far surpasses our own in structure and convenience. You will probably be surprised to know that although this asylum is the only one in the State, there are at present only about ninety inmates, a fact that the people here consider convincing proof that the climate is a panacea for every human ill. I have recently witnessed the effect of a gold excitement in the average western mind. It was rumored here some weeks ago that gold had been discovered at Mt. Pisgah, a place about forty miles inland from here; in a few hours the excitement had pervaded the whole city, and so strong was the faith of the people in the report that many gave up excellent positions on the chance of its proving true. For several days the city was almost deserted and then they began to return, the saddest, most disappointed lot I ever saw. The mine had been "salted." I find myself growing more interested in the eastern crops than I had ever deemed possible, probably from the fact that we have no crops here, the soil being barren and unproductive, only producing a tough grass called gramma in consequence of which the surrounding country is used chiefly for stock ranches. I am perfectly infatuated with the West now, but at first I was greatly disappointed, as I fancy all people are who are accustomed to green fields and forest lands. There are no trees here except the cottonwood and very few of them; the soil is barren, the alkali dust is not only disagreeable but very destructive to female fertility. I have never envied men so thoroughly in my life as the ones I see walking on the streets here, they haven't a fear of soiled skirts, and can go home and read their newspapers in peace with no knife playing to brush. I am going to Del Norte in a few days over the Rio Grande road and will try to tell you next time something of the Le Veta Pass.
